Gonzales Accused of Deceit

Senators weigh special prosecutor for Justice Dept. probe

WASHINGTON | Angry senators suggested a special prosecutor should investigate misconduct at the Justice Department, accusing Attorney General Alberto Gonzales on Tuesday of deceit on the prosecutor firings and President Bush's eavesdropping program.

Democrats and Republicans alike hammered Gonzales in four hours of testimony as he denied trying, in 2004, to push a hospitalized former attorney general into approving a counterterrorism program that the Justice Department then viewed as illegal.

Gonzales, alternately appearing wearied and seething, vowed anew to remain in his job even as senators told him outright they believe he is unqualified to stay.

He would not answer numerous questions, including whether the Bush administration would bar its U.S. attorneys from pursuing contempt charges against former White House officials who have defied congressional subpoenas for their testimony.

Gonzales

"It's hard to see anything but a pattern of intentionally misleading Congress again and again," Sen. Russ Feingold, D-Wis., said during the often-bitter Senate Judiciary Committee hearing. "Shouldn't the attorney general of the United States meet a higher standard?"

"Obviously, there have been instances where I have not met that standard, and I've tried to correct that," Gonzales answered. (AP)

FLAWED LOGIC

Kids Won't Listen? Douse Them in Water

A Malaysian teacher has defended her move to punish 170 teenage girls by making them squat neck-deep in a fish pond. Wee Yim Pien, an English teacher and warden at a boarding school on Borneo island, told the Star newspaper that she sent the girls into the pond for 30 minutes last week after they repeatedly ignored her warnings to stop throwing sanitary pads into toilet bowls. Wee, 27, denied that the pond water was dirty, saying the water was often used for washing and the school had also conducted obstacle courses in the pond, according to the report. (AP)

COINCIDENCES

Unhappy Returns

A woman whose purse was stolen and the thief who took it inadvertently stood next to each other at a Prescott, Ariz., bookstore recently. The victim went to the store on Tuesday to say that someone had stolen her purse and had used her credit card to buy $200 in DVDs. Minutes later, while the woman was standing there, a man came up to the counter and tried to return eight DVDs in exchange for cash. The two didn't recognize each other, but the manager who handled both transactions connected the dots. The man fled but was later caught by police, who say he admitted to committing the crime. (AP)

Some people are content to stick to acceptable boundaries: color within the lines, don't speak out of turn, obey the laws of gravity. It's that last rule that these motorcyclists vroomed past during a show in northeast China on Tuesday. And don't they look happier for it? (EXPRESS)

Gallopin' Getaway

They weren't charged with drunken driving, but police said two people now charged with public drunkenness in Culpeper, Va., did try to evade capture on horseback. The duo's troubles started when one of the two, a man, was chided by onlookers for allegedly urinating on the side of a convenience store. Witnesses say he hopped on his horse, charged the crowd and then galloped away with his companion. The two were nabbed by police after they fell off their horses. (AP/EXPRESS)

No Charges in Mercy Killings Case

Doctor was accused of giving fatal injections after Katrina hit N.O.

NEW ORLEANS | A grand jury refused on Tuesday to indict a doctor accused of murdering four seriously ill hospital patients with drug injections during the desperate aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, closing the books on the only mercy killings case to emerge from the storm.

Dr. Anna Pou acknowledged administering medication to the patients but insisted she did so only to relieve pain.

Pou and two nurses were arrested last summer after Attorney General Charles Foti concluded they gave "lethal cocktails" to four patients at the flooded-out, sweltering Memorial Medical Center after the August 2005 storm.

The decision was a defeat for Foti, who accused the doctor and the nurses, but it was the New Orleans district attorney who presented the case to the grand jury, asking it to bring murder and conspiracy charges.

At a news conference, Pou fought back tears as she read a prepared statement. She refused to answer questions about what happened at the hospital because of lawsuits filed by families of three patients.

"Today's events are not a triumph but a moment of remembrance for those who lost their lives during the storm and a tribute to all those who stayed at their posts and served people most in need," Pou said.

If another hurricane threatened, Pou added, she would stay on duty in a hospital, but she is concerned her case will keep other medical professionals from remaining with patients during storms.

"All of us need to remember the magnitude of human suffering that occurred in the city of New Orleans in the wake of Hurricane Katrina so we can be assured that this never happens again and that no health care professional should ever be falsely accused in a rush to judgment," she said. # Lugar Questions Political Meetings

White House aides briefed diplomats on GOP election chances

WASHINGTON | Political briefings given by White House aides to high-ranking diplomats "were probably inappropriate" and should stop, the top Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said

Tuesday.

The comments by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., were in contrast to White House assertions that the private briefings were not unusual or improper.

Starting in 2001, White House

political aides gave at least a half-dozen briefings to top diplomats about key Republican races and Bush's re-election goals, according to documents obtained by the Senate committee.

Administration officials said Tuesday there was nothing surprising or inappropriate about the briefings.

"You've got political appointees getting political briefings," White House press secretary Tony Snow said with sarcasm. "I'm shocked. Shocked."

State Department spokesman Sean McCormack said the briefings did not violate the Hatch Act nor the department's "very strict guidelines" that bar partisan political activity by diplomats. The Hatch Act protects federal employees from involvement in partisan politics and bars the use of most federal facilities for partisan purposes. (AP)

Obama's comment in debate draws fire from Clinton camp

WASHINGTON | Sen. Barack Obama's offer to meet without precondition with leaders of renegade nations such as Cuba, North Korea and Iran touched off a war of words, with rival Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton calling him naive and Obama likening her diplomatic approach to President Bush's.

Obama's comment in the Democratic debate on Monday triggered a round of competing memos and statements Tuesday between the chief Democratic presidential rivals. Obama's team portrayed it as a bold stroke; Clinton supporters saw it as a gaffe that underscored the Obama's lack of foreign policy experience.

"I thought that was irresponsible and, frankly, naive," Clinton told the Quad-City Times in Iowa.

In response, Obama told the newspaper that her stand on the issue puts her in line with the Bush

Both parties were weighing the potential political fallout from the comment, especially in Florida, an early primary state pivotal to the general election — and where Cuban President Fidel Castro remains particularly unpopular.

"Anything that looks like pandering to dictators is bad politics in South Florida," said Republican state Rep. David Rivera of Miami. He predicted Obama's comments would come back to haunt him, particularly if he becomes the Democratic nominee. TOM RAUM (AP)

Medics Freed in Libya HIV Scandal

Secretive deal leads to release of foreign workers held since '99

SOFIA, BULGARIA | Tears and jubilation greeted six medics freed by Libya on Tuesday after nearly a decade languishing in jail over widely rejected accusations they deliberately infected children with HIV, ending a nightmare that drove at least one to attempt suicide.

Behind the dramatic release of five Bulgarian nurses and a Palestinian doctor were secretive negotiations involving the French president's wife.

But questions remain about what concessions were made to Moammar Gadhafi's regime — with reports emerging from Tripoli that a charity created to compensate the infected children and their families saw its funds jump 100-fold to $400 million through European contributions.

Libya had accused the six of deliberately infecting more than 400 Libyan children with the virus that causes AIDS; 50 of the children died. The medics, jailed since 1999 with most of those years passed under a death sentence, deny knowingly infecting the children and say their confessions were extracted under torture.

The six were whisked from Tripoli to the Bulgarian capital aboard France's presidential jet, their release secured during a trip to Libya by French first lady Cecilia Sarkozy and the European Union's commissioner for foreign affairs, Benita Ferrero-Waldner.

The medics were welcomed on the tarmac by relatives, one lifting the Palestinian doctor, Ashraf al-Hazouz, off the ground. Bulgaria granted him citizenship last month. The six were immediately pardoned by Bulgarian President Georgi Parvanov.

European Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso said the EU hoped to "normalize our relations with Libya. Our relations with Libya were to a large extent blocked by the non-settlement of this medics issue." VESELIN TOSHKOV (AP)

Putin Blasts U.K. Extradition Bid As 'Colonial' Relic

MOSCOW | President Vladimir Putin took a war of words with London to new heights Tuesday, angrily dismissing British demands for the extradition of the sole suspect in the murder of former KGB agent Alexander Litvinenko as a relic of British "colonial thinking."

"They are making proposals to change our constitution which are insulting for our nation and our people," Putin said in televised remarks. "What they are offering to us is a clear remnant of colonial thinking."

Boycott Leaves Gazans on the Edge

Economy takes new hits amid isolation after Hamas takeover

BEIT HANOUN, GAZA STRIP | Mamoun Hamada's cannery, which used to provide a living for hundreds of people, is phasing out production, along with 80 percent of the factories in Gaza, after the territory was sealed off from the world following the Hamas takeover last month.

The international community, including its visiting new Mideast envoy Tony Blair, must now decide whether it wants to keep Gaza isolated as part of its boycott of Hamas, but at the cost of destroying Gaza's economy and turning the area's 1.4 million residents into increasingly resentful welfare recipients.

The strict closure has forced the 40 percent, according to the Palestinian Federation of Industries.

Since June 3, 190 Gaza factories and workshops have closed, and the remaining 20 percent have reduced production, Palestinian business leaders said.

Since the Hamas takeover, Israel has permitted Gaza to import only food and basic supplies, blocking imports of raw materials for industry and all exports of Gaza goods.

It's difficult to gauge how hard Hamas' political rival, the West Bank-based government of moderates installed by President Mahmoud Abbas, is pushing for a reopening of the Gaza crossings.

Mideast analyst Mouin Rabbani said Abbas appears to be trying to punish Hamas.

"There's an element of trying to demonstrate to the population [in Gaza] that this is what you get when ruled by Hamas," said Rabbani, of the International Crisis Group. (AP)

Web Outage Adds To Netflix's Woes

As stock prices drop on dim earnings, site goes down for hours

SAN FRANCISCO | Netflix Inc. frustrated investors and customers alike Tuesday as its stock price plunged to its lowest point in more than two years while its Web site remained inaccessible through most of the day because of unexplained technical problems.

The 7 percent drop in Netflix's shares wasn't a shock after the Los Gatos, Calif.-based company reported the first quarterly customer losses in its history and dimmed its earnings outlook for the rest of the year.

But the Web site outage was a surprising — and embarrassing — setback.

The online hub of Netflix's rental system went down Monday evening and remained unavailable as of late Tuesday afternoon, locking out subscribers for more than 18 hours. Spokesman Steve Swasey attributed the outage to an unanticipated problem that he declined to describe.

By 4 p.m. EDT, Netflix had stopped providing estimates of when the trouble would be fixed after missing several earlier targets for restoring the Web site.

Netflix had been in the process of updating its computers to reflect price reductions that took effect Tuesday. MICHAEL LIEDTKE (AP)

Alleged Drug Kingpin Arrested in Wheaton

WASHINGTON | A Chinese-Mexican businessman, tied to what U.S. officials say was the world's largest seizure of drug cash, is facing criminal charges in two countries that he trafficked in massive amounts of amphetamines destined for the United States.

Ye Gon conspired to smuggle drugs into the United States and laundered millions of dollars from illegal drug sales at Las Vegas casinos and elsewhere, the U.S. government said in a criminal complaint that was made public Tuesday.

He has lost more than $125 million gambling in Las Vegas since 2004, the government said.

Ye Gon was arrested Monday night in Wheaton, Md., as he ate dinner at an Asian restaurant. Dressed in an open-necked checked shirt and tan pants, he appeared Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Washington, where he was ordered held without bond for at least the next 10 days. His next hearing is scheduled for Aug. 3.

Ye Gon has been in the United States since March, around the same time police discovered $207 million at his Mexico City mansion. Mexican Attorney General Medina Mora said the cash seized at Ye Gon's home was connected to one of the hemisphere's largest networks for trafficking pseudoephedrine, the main ingredient in methamphetamines. He said the ring had been operating since 2004, illegally importing the substance and selling it to a drug cartel that mixed it into the crystal form and exported to the United States.

Terror Suspect Sentenced

Va. man gets 10 years for lying to FBI during terrorism investigation

ALEXANDRIA, VA. | In a precedent-setting case, a Virginia man was sentenced to 10 years in prison Tuesday for lying to authorities about his participation in a militant training camp in Pakistan after prosecutors successfully argued that his lies obstructed a wide-ranging terrorism investigation.

Under normal sentencing guidelines, Sabri Benkahla, 32, of Falls Church would have received at most a three-year term for his convictions earlier this year on charges of lying to a grand jury, obstruction of justice and making a false statement.

But for the first time, prosecutors were able to obtain a stiffer sentence by arguing that Benkahla's lies effectively promoted terrorism. Prosecutor Gordon Kromberg argued that Benkahla stymied an FBI investigation when he refused to tell a grand jury about his contacts on a 1999 trip to a training camp run by a group called Lashkar-e-Taiba, which the U.S. has since designated a terrorist organization and Kromberg said has links to al-Qaeda.

Defense lawyers argued that prosecutors were bitter because Benkahla previously had been acquitted on charges of giving aid to the Taliban and that they were setting a perjury trap by hauling him in front of the grand jury in 2004.

Benkahla's case is one of about a dozen linked to what prosecutors called a "Virginia jihad network" of young U.S. Muslim men who played paintball as a means of training for holy war and who worshipped at the now-defunct Dar al-Arqam mosque in Falls Church. Benkahla, a natural-born U.S. citizen who grew up in Fairfax County, said that he had been studying overseas "because I wanted to help bridge the gap between the East and West."

The Lincoln MKX has exterior styling worth a second glance and a base price in the mid-$30,000s — but a few inside details could use a bit of an upgrade.

Lincoln's Bright Star

The MKX is poetry in motion — with some fine excess

ROAD TEST | The Lincoln MKX is the upscale version of the Ford Edge crossover, Dearborn's tidy people mover with a 3.5-liter V6, six-speed transmission and available all-wheel drive.

So, naturally, it makes me think of John Keats.

One of the unluckiest sods ever to pick up a quill, Keats once wrote that "poetry should surprise by fine excess and not by singularity." Well, there's nothing singular about the MKX. Under the bling, the Lincoln is virtually identical to the Ford, churned out in dizzying numbers from a factory in Canada. This is badge engineering, chapter and verse.

As for fine excess, the MKX has that covered. For $44,270, our AWD-equipped test car was positively jammed with tech toys (adaptive headlamps, reverse sensing system), comforts (heated and ventilated front seats, heated rear seats) and conveniences (remote fold-flat release for the second-row seats, power rear hatch). Among the MKX's signature amenities is the THX-II certified surround-sound system, an astonishing bit of audio equipment that's loud enough to pulverize kidney stones while you drive.

So, does that mean the MKX is poetry? Ah, no, not really. But it's the liveliest lyric that's come from Lincoln in a while and a pretty tempting vehicle for the money, particularly as you factor in whatever spiffs your local Lincoln dealer may be offering. Even at retail, our MKX undercuts the comparably equipped Lexus RX350 by several thousand dollars.

Thoreau Recreation

Maine group aims to let tourists walk same path as writer

HIKES | Henry David Thoreau made his third and final trip to Maine's North Woods 150 years ago, traveling on waterways and through forests that shaped so many of his ideas about nature.

A nonprofit group on Monday unveiled what it calls the Thoreau-Wabanaki Trail to pay tribute to Thoreau — who some consider to be the first ecotourist — and the Penobscot Indian guides who accompanied him on two of his treks.

Maine Woods Forever has produced a detailed map of Thoreau's trips and will erect informational kiosks along different parts of Thoreau's route. The group also has worked in partnership with a photographer who is producing a book of photos, "Wildness Within, Wildness Without," retracing Thoreau's steps.

The map is thought to be the first of its kind that tracks each of Thoreau's trips, day by day as he canoed Moosehead Lake, the Penobscot River and its tributaries, and climbed Mount Katahdin. "I hope what comes of this is a better understanding of the potential that the North Woods has to offer everyone in the world when it comes right down to it," said Don Hudson, president of Maine Woods Forever.

Stern: Ref Scandal 'an Isolated Case'

NBA commissioner calls situation the worst he's ever experienced

NBA | David Stern blamed a "rogue, isolated criminal" Tuesday for a betting scandal that has devastated the league and threatened the credibility of every referee.

Stern also called it the "worst situation" he's experienced in his 23 years at the helm, but he said he believed no other officials or players would be implicated.

"Mr. Donaghy is the only referee alleged to have bet on NBA games and disclosed confidential information to others," Stern said Tuesday, referring to Tim Donaghy during a packed news conference. "I'll say it again: I understand this is an isolated case."

The FBI is investigating Donaghy for allegedly betting on games he officiated during the last two seasons. In his first public comments since news of the investigation broke, a subdued Stern said he felt betrayed on behalf of NBA fans.

Stern said his understanding is that Donaghy is being investigated for betting on games, including some he officiated, and for providing insider information to others so they could profit by betting on games.

"The current state of what we're dealing with is betting and providing information," Stern said. "I don't know of any charges yet or any discussions yet as to fixing of games."

Stern called it the "worst situation I've ever experienced either as fan of the NBA, a lawyer for the NBA or commissioner of the NBA."

The FBI first contacted the NBA on June 20 to talk about a referee alleged to be gambling on games, and the two sides met on June 21, Stern said. Donaghy resigned July 9. BRIAN MAHONEY (AP)

Ronnie Belliard is batting .313 with five home runs in games in which he started. He can play three of the four infield positions.

Versatility Keeps Belliard a National

NATS NOTES

WHEN THE NATIONALS signed Ronnie Belliard in February, he was viewed as a potential utility man and a definite insurance policy.

On Tuesday, Belliard inked a two-year, $3.5 million extension that could keep him in Washington through the 2009 season.

"As an organization, we have gained a deep appreciation for Ronnie's work ethic and approach, especially as it has influenced our young players," general manager Jim Bowden said.

A former all-star, the 32-year-old has become a valuable commodity because of his ability to adapt.

As a starter, he was batting .313 with 17 doubles and five homers entering Tuesday. When he doesn't start, he's the team's most dangerous hitter off the bench. Add to that his ability to play three of the four infield positions, and the Nats have another quality piece to the team that will open the new ballpark next spring.

Unintentional

Twice this month, opposing pitchers have intentionally walked Ryan Zimmerman only to have the worst possible fate befall them.

Sunday, Colorado walked him only to have Austin Kearns smash a three-run homer. On July 4, the Cubswalked Zimmerman and Dmitri Young followed with a grand slam.

"It's what you do," manager Manny Acta said. "You take your chances on getting out of the inning on one pitch."

Redding Revved Up

Right-hander Tim Redding's promotion to the big-league club was more a product of necessity than merit. But Redding took the ball and doesn't want to give it up. With 6 2/3 shutout innings in Sunday's victory, Redding lowered his ERA to 2.92 in his four starts. DEREK TURNER

Selig Will Try to See Bonds' HR

Commissioner says he will attend Giants' games this week

BASEBALL | Baseball commissioner Bud Selig will attempt to attend the game when Barry Bonds breaks Hank Aaron's career home run record, saying the San Francisco Giants star was "innocent until proven guilty."

"Throughout this season, I have watched Barry Bonds' pursuit of the home run record. Now that he is on the verge of tying the record, the time has come to announce that I will make every attempt to attend the record-setting moment," Selig said in a statement Tuesday.

"Out of respect for the tradition of this game, the magnitude of the record, and the fact that all citizens in this country are innocent until proven guilty, I will attend Barry Bonds' next games to observe his potential tying and breaking of the home run record, subject to my commitments to the Hall of Fame this weekend."

Doping Strikes Tour Again

Blood from prerace favorite tests positive following stage win

CYCLING | Cycling fans loved the rider they called Vino. And he loved to deliver results — just not the type that came out of a laboratory on Tuesday and ended his run in this year's Tour de France.

Alexandre Vinokourov was a pre-race favorite who excited Tour fans by rebounding from a bad crash in the fifth stage to stay in contention until Sunday's 14th stage. Then he won Monday's stage as consolation. Tuesday — a rest day — brought news that he tested positive for a blood transfusion after winning Saturday's time trial.

His B sample is expected by the end of the week, coinciding with the end of another tainted Tour.

Astana suspended the Kazakh rider and also withdrew its team from the Tour, ending the chances of its best-placed rider, Andreas Kloeckner, who was fifth.

"Alexandre denies having manipulated his blood," Astana manager Marc Biver said, adding that Vinokourov believes the "blood anomalies in his body" may have resulted from the crash.

During the fifth stage on July 12 from Chablais to Autun, Vinokourov fell and hurt his knees so badly that he needed at least 30 stitches. He refused to pull out and slogged up the Alps even though he was losing time to his rivals.

On Saturday, Vinokourov blew away the field with a remarkable performance on a 34-mile time trial around Albi. He was 1:14 ahead of second-place Cadel Evans of Australia. JEROME PUGMIRE (AP)

D.C. Readies for Inaugural Tourney

United to host Mexico's Morelia in its first game for SuperLiga

UNITED | Its mid-season doldrums exacerbated by Sunday's frustrating loss in New York, D.C. United will take a welcome break from MLS play Wednesday when it hosts Mexico's Morelia in the inaugural SuperLiga competition.

Looking to capitalize on the rivalry between their national teams, MLS and the Mexican Football Federation teamed up to launch SuperLiga, a monthlong tournament featuring four clubs from each country. While future participation will be based on merit, MLS opted to invite four higher-profile teams to play in the inaugural event, which offers $1 million to the victor.

Morelia is the least decorated of the four Mexican entrants and joins D.C., Houston and 10-time Mexican champ America in Group B. The other foursome features Los Angeles, Dallas, Chivas Guadalajara and CONCACAF titlist Pachuca. The semifinals are in mid-August, with the final scheduled for Aug. 29.

Jaime Moreno and Bryan Namoff continue to struggle with hamstring injuries and may miss Wednesday's game. BRIAN STRAUS

Where Is Credit Due?

Some singers write their songs, and some try to claim they did

KUDOS | Of all the names in music, Chantal Kreviazuk may be the least likely to appear in a headline. Though she recently released her own album, the songwriter usually stays behind the scenes to pen hits with artists such as Kelly Clarkson, Gwen Stefani and Avril Lavigne.

But earlier this month, Kreviazuk rocked the pop music world by suggesting that Lavigne was a collaborator in name only. Although she quickly retracted her comments and others defended Lavigne, the flap illuminated a long-standing fraud that has become more prevalent than ever: "singer-songwriters" who do much less songwriting than their publicists would have you believe.

"It's crazy!" exclaimed Grammy-winning songwriter Diane Warren, who has written for artists such as Whitney Houston, Celine Dion and Mary J. Blige. "How can someone look in the mirror and know they didn't do something and their name is on it? For money? For credit? It's a lie."

This being the music industry, money is, of course, a factor, since the writers of hit songs can earn more than the singer over the long term. But today's singers also press for writing credit because it gives them more of a cachet, presenting them as more of a "real artist" in comparison with a star who does not write a note.

SO COMPLICATED: Singer? Songwriter? Singer-songwriter? Comments made about Avril Lavigne provoke questions about some artists claiming to be both.

For example, Lavigne's songwriting abilities have been touted since she broke out as a teen with the hit "Complicated." But how much she contributed to her music has long been scrutinized.

She connected with Kreviazuk for her sophomore album and the two became close friends. Kreviazuk lauded her songwriting ability in an interview with the AP, also in 2004 — which made Kreviazuk's comments to Performing Songwriting Magazine all the more curious.

"I mean, Avril, songwriter? Avril doesn't really sit and write songs by herself or anything. Avril will also cross the ethical line, and no one says anything," Kreviazuk told the magazine before retracting her statement.

Grammy-winning songwriter Dallas Austin has had a manager rave about a song Austin wrote all by himself, and then tell him, "We wanna know if we can get a piece of the pie on it because [the artist] wants to feel like she has a part ownership on the song."

"And I'll say, 'In all fairness ... no.'" NEKESA MUMBI MOODY (AP)

NATALIE COLE Unforgettable

1 Nat King's little girl is still going strong since her rise to fame in the '70s and is on the road sharing her sweet R&B sound. Her most recent album, "Leavin'," is an eclectic collection of covers, on which Cole takes on everything from Fiona Apple's "Criminal" to Neil Young's "Old Man." She's true R&B royalty, and you can check her out tonight at Wolf Trap.

JOHN MAYER Swoon-worthy

2 Teenage girls, beware: doe-eyed John Mayer pays a visit to the District tonight to sweep you off your feet. His mellow guitar and recently political lyrics certainly land him a spot in the oh-so-dreamy-but-trying-to-be-more category. Ben Folds will open.

An Extra Side of Gross

'300' is out on DVD and brags a number of bloody features

DVD | The men bare their chests while the blood spurts in slow-motion excess in "300," the film version of Frank Miller's graphic novel. Fans of this CGI-dominated take on the battle of Thermopylae can get their hands on this two-disc special edition ($34.98) when it arrives July 31.

The New York Times' A.O. Scott did not approve: "'300' is about as violent as 'Apocalypto' and twice as stupid." I, however, appreciated the look of the film, which makes a concerted effort to match the artistic style of the realm of self-parody.

Before this movie's legion of macho admirers fires a mess of arrows at me, let's talk extras. The special-edition DVD boasts a good number of them, including five featurettes, three deleted scenes, a series of Webisodes about the film's production and a commentary track with director Zack Snyder. Of the lot, "The 300: Fact or Fiction," a 24-minute featurette that puts the fictionalized tale of the Spartans and the Persians into historical context, is the most worthwhile.

Best bloody bonus: Of the three deleted scenes, the last offering — featuring a close-up of a leg getting sliced in two — is the only one sure to satisfy those with an appetite for more gore. JEN CHANEY (WASHINGTONPOST.COM)

Now you can appreciate the gore of "300" from the comfort of your couch.

A Natural Talent

American artist John Audubon captured the nation in its youth

PAINTER | While many people are familiar with John James Audubon's remarkable series of paintings "Birds of America," his "American Masters" (10 p.m., PBS) biography, "Drawn From Nature," reveals a larger-than-life character who reflects both the promise and excess of the young American nation.

Born illegitimate in Haiti, he and his French father barely escaped a bloody slave uprising. They decamped for France only to endure the French Revolution and the Reign of Terror. Audubon returned to the New World to escape being drafted into Napoleon's army.

Audubon began concentrating his remarkable talents on painting and illustrating birds after decades of failed businesses and bankruptcy. His talent for art was exceeded only by his penchant for self-promotion, a trait that earned him scorn in the American scientific community. But like many American artists ignored in their own country, Audubon was discovered and embraced by Europeans who were fascinated by his unique combination of talent and well-rehearsed, rough-hewn manners and buckskin getup. As the narrator observes, Audubon became a kind of 19th-century rock star. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Europe's ski resorts are melting away as the climate changes

Muddy slopes, slushy peaks, unused lifts — this town in the French Alps is living out the nightmare of many a ski resort in a century scientists say is doomed to keep getting warmer.

The city council of Abondance — its name a cruel reminder of the generous snowfall it once enjoyed — voted 9-6 last month to shut down the ski station that has been its economic raison d'être for more than 40 years. The reason: not enough snow.

Abondance is the French Alps' first ski station to fall apparent victim to global warming, and it will almost certainly not be the last.

At 3,051 feet, this station between Mont Blanc and Lake Lemman falls in the altitude range climate scientists say has seen the most dramatic drop in snowfall in recent generations.

The Alps as a whole, which attract about 70 million tourists every year, are "particularly sensitive" to climate change, according to a study last winter by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

It calls climate change a serious threat to Alpine ski resorts and the regional economies that depend on them. The most recent World Cup ski circuit was badly hit by a lack of snow, with several races in the Abondance, once a hot spot for skiing in the French Alps, has been forced to close.

Alps — even at high altitudes — called off.

In Switzerland, melting permafrost has forced several companies to take technical measures to ensure their stations don't fall off the mountain.

Last week, a commercial court in Lyon put the Transmontagne company — which operates mid-altitude resorts in France, Switzerland, Italy and Slovenia — under bankruptcy protection for the next six months. Warming weather is seen as a key reason for its financial woes.

Abondance's troubles are alarming towns in the surrounding valleys. Homeowners fear a crash in housing prices, and neighboring La Chappelle-d'Abondance is considering changing its name to dissociate itself from the shutting station.

Abondance Mayor Serge Cettour-Meunier fears that the closure of his station is the start of a troubling trend.

"Skiing is again becoming a sport for the rich," since only elite high-altitude resorts will have sufficient snowfall, he said.

Skiers who once frequented Abondance are likely to head to larger, higher stations elsewhere in the French Alps. But even some high stations in Switzerland have resorted to artificial snow in recent years.

Long-term, the warming in the Alps could provide a boost to less-charted places like the mountains above Sochi, the Russian city on the Black Sea that is hosting the 2014 Winter Olympics.

In Abondance, where snow fell only 20 days last year, town officials have been seeking private buyers for the station for several years. Transmontagne and Remy Loisirs expressed interest but never followed through, the mayor said.

Jean-Charles Simiand, president of the French national union for ski lifts and cable cars, said finding a replacement for skiing in a town like Abondance can be difficult. The lifts can be used for hikers and mountain bikers in summer, but that activity accounts for just 3 percent of overall lift revenues.

"The mid-altitude stations must adapt," he said. "Diversification of the economy is possible, but so far no one has found an activity that can substitute for skiing."

The hot black market for dairy crates leads police to take action

For decades, college students in the United States have used stolen milk crates as the basic building blocks of coffee tables and dormitory room shelves.

Now, a new breed of crate rustler is cashing in by swiping thousands of the containers from loading docks and selling them to shady recyclers.

The containers are chopped into bits and shipped to booming factories in China to be made into a variety of products, from pipes to flower pots.

Facing an estimated $80 million in annual losses from the thefts, dairies across the U.S. are moving to stop the plastic pilfering. In California, companies are even hiring private detectives and staging sting operations.

A wanted poster for milk crates is posted at the Alta Dena Dairy plant in California.

"We saw them disappearing into this black hole," said Rachel Kaldor, executive director of the Dairy Institute, a trade group in Sacramento. "We just don't know who's stealing these crates off the loading docks."

In the past two years, the high-density polyethylene has joined a growing list of materials that are being stolen and sold via a thriving underground recycling network.

"We saw them disappearing into this black hole. We just don't know who's stealing these crates off the docks."

RACHEL KALDOR, DAIRY INSTITUTE

Among other things, thieves target copper, aluminum bleachers, beer kegs, even cemetery vases and nameplates.

It took a while for dairies to determine what was happening to their crates.

"If it were just college kids taking them, the dormitories would be overflowing with milk cases," said Stephen Schaffer, general manager of Alta Dena Dairy near Los Angeles.

California, the nation's largest dairy state, has taken the lead in the fight against plastic poachers.

Already hurt by the theft of milk-producing hormones and incidents of cattle rustling, the state dairy industry convinced legislators to pass a law last year that allows dairies to sue recyclers accused of accepting stolen crates.

After the law went into effect in January, the Dairy Institute hired private investigator Chuck Wall to educate recyclers about documenting purchases and to conduct sting operations against suspected offenders.

Wall, the CEO of Creative Security of San Jose, began his efforts close to his home in Santa Clara County, building on a previous local law enforcement crackdown on the theft of copper wire from construction sites.

Wall said his biggest bust targeted E.S. Plastics in the Los Angeles suburb of Maywood.

"It took a 50-foot trailer to haul all the stolen property out of there — at least a quarter-million dollars of plastics," Wall said.

Individual dairies, meanwhile, are adding security staff to solve the milk crate mystery.

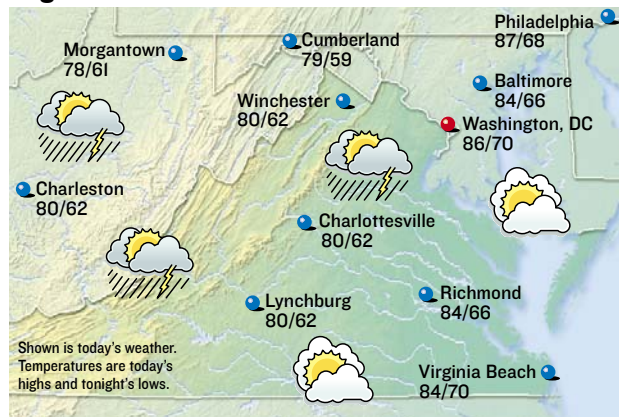

Alta Dena Dairy, located east of Los Angeles, hired Edmund Woods, a former police officer, to find its stolen containers.

"We don't take a large SWAT team in, just one or two officers for a uniformed presence," Woods said. "We're very polite, and we go in real soft." RAQUEL MARIA DILLON (AP)

SCOTT KAHLER/ALEXANDRIA HARMONIZERS

NO ROOFTOP PERFORMANCE: The Alexandria Harmonizers, a barbershop chorus, can take you back to when the Be Sharps and "Baby on Board" ruled the airways.

You can find a bit of Springfield here in our own capital city

Just like how Milhouse pines for the brainy Lisa, fans of "The Simpsons" have waited years for the cartoon to hit the silver screen. On Friday, they'll get their wish – after three seasons on "The Tracey Ullman Show" and 18 seasons on their own, the Simpsons take Hollywood by storm (Herman would be so proud). But before you lay a finger on Bart's Butterfinger and watch Jebediah's town in the movie theater, spend a day in Washington being as Simpsons-esque as possible.

Start your day at the International Spy Museum (800 F St. NW; 202-393-7798), where you can pull an Adil Hoxha and pick up some gadgets, like the Spy Shot digital camera and voice recorder ($22), to score your very own naughty pictures with Princess Kashmir.

From there, continue your "Miss Lisa Goes to Washington" adventure with a stop at the Fractured Prune (2153 P St. NW; 202-822-0880), where you can order either the menu's Homer Simpson doughnut (with pink glaze and sprinkles, similar to the one in the movie's poster, $1.85) or your own calorie-packed version (like we did above) by choosing a glaze and adding every topping possible, including rainbow sprinkles, chocolate jimmies, coconut, peanuts, chocolate chips and powdered sugar. No, a Twizzler is not a topping, but everything else is, if you're in a Homer state of mind.

Day of D'h

Bring a doughnut with you when you visit Dodson's Liberty Books and Comics (7315 Baltimore Ave., 301-699-0498) store in College Park. Owner Jim Dodson, who admits a resemblance to the Comic Book Guy, would appreciate the treat.

"There's skinny comic book dealers, too, and guys that work out, but they're a minority," Dodson said. "I guess I see a little bit of myself in [Comic Book Guy], who obviously does have lunch behind the register, and sometimes some of his lunch does appear on his shirt. There's a stereotype, but there's a little truth there."

Once you're done chatting with Dodson about Radioactive Man and your favorite "Simpsons" episodes ("Bart Sells His Soul" and "Marge vs. the Monorail" top Dodson's list), swing over to Fort Ward Park to catch the Alexandria Harmonizers perform free on July 26. Although Scipio Garling, owner of Big Monkey Comics (1722-B 14th St. NW; 202-333-8650) and member of the Alexandria Harmonizers, and his fellow barbershoppers won't be sporting red vests and wicker hats à la the Be Sharps ("We're much more likely to wear tuxedos," Garling said), they still appreciate the attention.

"I think the Be Sharps were great; it's great exposure to barbershop," Garling said of Homer's barbershop quartet. "It's a kind of recognition that that kind of male harmony is the basis of a lot of popular music. Every boy band is basically an altered barbershop quartet."

And, finally, once your day of traipsing around Washington is done, find your local movie theater and catch "The Simpsons Movie." After all, it can't be worse than a cesspool on the Potomac.

Chocolate cereal is not exactly a morning breakthrough. Basically, it's the oldest trick in the breakfast book. But add a little cocoa to Chex and suddenly there's proof that some ideas are worth revisiting. New CHOCOLATE CHEX ($3, grocery stores) squares have been integrated with the traditional ones in a sort of yin and yang balance, protecting the cereal from being too sweet for its own good. The cereal stays crunchy, and the powder actually melts off in your mouth, making this coating more like the real deal. Plus, there's chocolate milk for dessert. JEN BEASLEY (EXPRESS)

The Games We Play

The new MARTINIS AND MEN ($15, martinisandmen.com) is a combination of Go Fish, Dungeons and Dragons, and craps, but without the strategy, imagination or fun. Two to eight players try to pair up couples (who are only heterosexual) by a combination of matching traits (like "sexy" and "traveller") and lucky rolls of the dice. When taken seriously, it's coma-inducingly stupid. But when played with a coed group of highly sarcastic friends, fun did ensue, if only to hear guys scream "COME ON, WEDDING FEVER!"

I can't help but find "Rock of Love" as being totally and utterly hilarious. Do you find humor in the show as well, and did you have moments when you found it hard to keep a straight face?

I'm glad you saw the humor in it. It was actually very important to me that everyone saw the humor in it; it was a side of me I have never really shown, and am looking forward to having my fans get to see it. So much of it blew my mind. These women were great, and to see the things they would do to compete and win in the upcoming challenges was amazing.

Reusable Bags Best of All

I FOUND IT ODD that the article "Annapolis Eyes Ban on Plastic Bags" (July 24) mentions only the plastic-versus-paper debate. Wouldn't the more obvious solution be reusable cloth bags? Each high-quality reusable bag has the potential to eliminate 1,000 disposable bags over its lifetime. Both plastic and paper bags are harmful to the environment, and so it seems rather futile to advocate using one over the other. Communities should work on eliminating the use of disposable bags altogether. I hope that the Annapolis ban is passed and that D.C. is soon to follow.

Straight Boy Breakups Latest Los Angeles Trend

Usmagazine.com reports that reality stars SPENCER PRATT and BRODY JENNER have ended 10 years of friendship. Their shared experiences included starring on FOX's "The Princes of Malibu" and MTV's "The Hills," plus lots of Hollywood-style partying. The rift reportedly started when Pratt made inflammatory remarks about Brody's ex-girlfriend Nicole Richie in a Details magazine story earlier this year, and the break was finalized about a month ago when Pratt was angered by Jenner reigniting a friendship with enemy Lauren Conrad. Much like he did to girlfriend Heidi Montag in "The Hills," Pratt gave Jenner an ultimatum: Pick between him and Conrad. Jenner reportedly chose Conrad. (EXPRESS)

Special Report solves the "My home isn't selling" problem

WASHINGTON METRO – A "Special Report" explodes what its author exposes as "The myth of slow home sales." In fact, the Report explains, in clear and plain English, how a home owner who wants to sell can not only count on a sale within 120 days but can be guaranteed that the sale will occur.

The Report proves its accuracy by quoting specific local instances in which the technique it describes has sold homes time after time, quickly, efficiently, and at a favorable price.

The author of the report, noted realtor Frank Sanya, has made numerous appearances on both television and radio.

Mr. Sanya states that the Report represents the compendium of his many years of real estate experience and can be of substantial value to homeowners, especially those whose homes have been on the market unsold for a considerable period of time. The author emphasizes that although he does not accept every listing, by following the Report's procedures he accomplishes a sale in every instance in which he is the broker of record.

The secret, says the Report, is a combination of traits and procedures that consistently result in a successful sale. For a free copy of the Report, go to a private but available Web site – www.WantItSoldNow.com.
